My Shard of Glass: Daithi's Inspirations and Poems David L. Dougherty

We all possess snapshots in time in our hearts and minds-images and memories that draw us back to our childhoods. In this collection of poetry and short stories, author David L. Dougherty combines whimsical make-believe with some truths about childhood experiences both tragic and lighthearted. Dougherty recalls looking through the shard of glass from the kitchen door of his boyhood home. He shares a boy's love for adventure and a mature man's appreciation of nature's beauty. He also explores the heartfelt connection that he made while walking the sod of Ireland, the land of his ancestors, and standing at the O'Dougherty castle bridge in Buncrana, Ireland. Combining whimsy and nostalgia, My Shard of Glass offers an exploration in verse of nature, childhood, and times gone by. Wish Two young boys, sitting on the bank, watching the big rigs run. One said, "I wish we were old enough for that kind of fun" The driver saw the boys waving, and with a grin, said to his partner, "I wish we were on that bank again"
